

New Age "Kundalini" Experiences

What is going on a lot in the New Age, is that a lot of people, in particular, do practice botched forms of meditation, all within the psychological perspective of the New Age and unnatural enemy teachings. These, of course, come with implications, causing a lot of delusion to a person.

The meaning here, as some people ask and question if all they read has any substance by them... Do not be fooled, and rather seek your experiences.

A lot of people are saying too much, talking too big, and have little things to show. This is a dead giveaway when it comes to these New Agers and unfortunately many others, they are nowhere spiritually. And this is because they do things that are paradoxical and opposed to human advancement.

One frequent lie everyone in the "New Age" community tells themselves is that they have a "Risen Kundalini Serpent". Some of them go as far as to claim that they are ascended, and when the witchdoctor new age stuff reaches the peak, even serious mental and physical diseases are all dismissed as "Symptoms of kundalini awakening" and other bollocks.

What some of these people are is that they have a lot of knowledge, or so they think they do. Reading about the path is not the same as walking it, any more than looking at the map of a formula 100 race track, and actually driving in it as a competitor on a race car. The differences here can be chaotic. The above "knowledge" leads them exactly where they pretend to try to move away from, which is a gross size of ego, with nothing really to back it up with, except of a short circuit of going back to this "ego" they whine about, and the situation ends with the kundalini becoming a marketing product.

And with the above many of them say they are race track agents just because they read this in a book by some Yogi who actually underwent an experience and decided to talk about it. Then these things take a life of their own, and this is why there is so much hoaxing in the New Age that it has reached alien proportions where practitioners are essentially just totally lost.

There are people who indeed, from their descriptions, not only are not ascending any kundalini, but they are tampering and having issues with the most basic energies of the soul and the most basic stimulations are not understood. Some of these energies, such as what is called "Apana Vayu", do ascend in the soul, and some do ascend from the rear channels when one is doing work on the soul. This does not mean that one is having a very deep end kundalini experience. Another situation that happens is that naturally, meditation does produce what we call as Pingala Fire, which is the purification fire, and this can be triggered in many ways, including from inner cleaning or just kundalini yoga or breathing exercises. Again, this is not "Kundalini Fire" in the direct sense, but falls under the category of the cleaning fire regardless.

New Agers are so deluded that they may experience a heartburn or whatever else physical, such as an infection, or whatever else, and the symptoms they pretend are spiritual symptoms. In some of their forums they whine that they have these problems for 10 years, even though they claim they are kundalini ascended. For all that "Kundalini Ascension", they are at a serious loss to even see the most basic things. This is because they are not on this level.

Indeed there is nothing of shame in any spiritual development, but the New Agers did a crime and that is to make the kundalini and meditation into a marketing scheme. Sort of like pay to this class a few thousand dollars and you'll get a kundalini too, type of thing.

The Western mentality of "I haz more kundaleeni dan u and I made dis in 7 weekz with supah speed program and meditating once every week homeboi" has poisoned meditation. Meditation is vilified, and all this disinformation, plus a strong streak of insanity, and the self-entitled syndrome of "God is love" and "We are all God's Children" and the related, create for a toxic combination of self-lying. Not only these people are not walking towards any kundalini development, they are walking in the opposite direction, which is creating an illusory situation of perpetual self-lying.

Very basic things such as soul cleaning, aura cleaning, and doing necessary chakra work are forsaken or done without attention. Lies are told that chakras are going to open if someone does a Vegan diet, or adheres to some strange alien belief system, people are distanced from actual spiritual work which will give them results. This is why we say we practice Power meditation and not mere 'meditation'. The soul needs to be empowered, cleaned and rectified, and this is not done by a mere external moral system.

Kundalini is looked upon by these people as a chihuahua that will complete their summer collection. They have an iPhone, nice handbag, sexy yoga pants, "how if you do not use a straw you saved the planet" bonus points, and now they also have a Kundalini and Universal Power at their disposal, cause after all they meditated for three weeks with Yogananda Brocollinda, which is a known supreme 1000 Naga Serpent Teacher with a giant hooknose also. Now, with the power of fake smiles, suppressed emotions, communist teachings, and vegan diets, they will implore the universe to join the borg, because of climate change.

The above is somehow called "Enlightenment" by these people, while essentially it's all the same mental hype we are being projected on by the unspiritual powers of this world ad nauseum, to lead us rather astray from self-realization. But somehow being the walking meme of this and only adding some kundalini prep talk into it, makes these people divinely realized or something.

The clearness of that these people have no power is that they do all the wrong decisions in life, and in particular, are aligned unnaturally and on some fake ideology. No meaningful powers arise, nor does any sensibility of consciousness come into any actual evolution from this. A mind that is exposing itself to actual kundalini experience, will have walls brought down, and one will start seeing larger truths, and not tabloid things one can find in any new age magazine. Another manifestation of the influence of Kundalini is increasing wisdom, which many of these people do not possess at all.

In rare cases, deception can take place by the enemy, who can trigger experiences, such as the things that happen in Evocations, where people, due to the shock of another entity's bioelectricity, experience a rising in the bioelectricity of their spine. What greys and other entities can do here is just pure deception, and this is why these experiences rarely have a meaning to them. People don't really transform from these experiences over time. This is not their own serpent or any personal awakening of theirs, this is just a mere feeling that arises in the body by increased bioelectricity of another entity within a space, or even lesser, just because of caused sensation.

Another thing that happens in many of these New Agers, is that the over-suppression of the sexual sacral energy, sometimes can cause a situation where the energy...is fighting for a release. This can in some cases as many of them are deeply into celibacy or sexual malfunction, causing pressures up the spine with said energy, commonly mistaken for kundalini rising. The pooling of this energy makes the situation worse, as the channel remains clogged and closed, and without release, more rectified energy cannot find its way up. At the late stages of this, one becomes neurotic and mentally ill.

Not that infrequent is also that due to extensive drug use, physical sensations are conflated with spiritual sensations. For example, these people do copious amounts of mushrooms or other strong drugs which powerfully affect the body, causing bodily reactions, creating sometimes a feeling of pressure in a specific area, or some strange jolt. Due to again a necessity to lie to themselves, they repeat again and again that these are spiritual sensations, but they are not.

These are sensations triggered in the grossly physical body, and they do not come from the superior and higher body down to this one, but rather, are results of chemical combinations on the grossly material body. Likewise, these sensations do not produce any further actual realization for the person, but just hallucinations. By hallucinating merely, one does not grow spiritually. Drugs should be avoided as they create conflicts and confusion in the spiritual path, and that is the least problem, as the further one goes, delusions and damages become many and require a lot of effort to heal.

Lastly, we have the final situation, where is when someone actually does get a little kundalini zap or some experience, especially if said people are more serious meditators such as very long-term meditators. And this is where things can get ugly for these people who compulsively try to get the serpent to ascend by force. As a famous saying goes "Do not try to force the snake out of the hole". These people do this regardless, with a psychological, spiritual, and mental emotional state that is completely antithetic to this power. One is asking for answers they do not want to hear, and one is asking for power they do not want or even need.

This compulsion, even if it fans as even a little flame, can be highly problematic for these people, and this is why some of them get issues that last for years and years after a botched Kundalini experience, in which they listened wrong advice from Moshe Shekelberg or had triggered involuntarily. Reading some of the things some New Agers write, some of them experience full and total paranoia from this, or insanity, lasting for years. Needless to say, the above amounts to an accident, and not to proper stimulation or rising of the kundalini energy, but rather a spiritual accident. Causes of such events can also be astrological alignments or transits that can, under circumstances, cause spiritual stimulation.

Then these people write books, and they fortify the already misinformed populace with even more deceptions. This is because these people have a huge ego, and they don't practice what they preach on limiting it either, so they want to pretend they are authorities when they do not even remotely understand some subjects. This creates turmoil on other people and increases confusion massively.

Turmoil is the result, and because they have no guidance on how to solve it, they remain ill physically or otherwise without the ability to solve the situation, sometimes lasting for years. This leads some of the more nutcase New Agers to of course condemn the Serpent and attack and vilify it as a "Tool of Satan", or even go as far as to try to create meditations for chakra removal or other foolish attempts at "Serpent removal", or even exorcisms. Of course this does not work so they remain like wrecks or then they run back to Rabbi Christ and become jeboo freaks all over again, or just remain in said state without properly advancing any further.

An example of why the above things happen is that people are, in the first place, in the New Age, in an attempt to reconcile a path of spiritual ignorance, with a path of mediocre spirituality. So, when one eventually pushes and makes progress, they are trying hopelessly to hold onto the ignorance they had before. Some even go as far as to try to bond this with the bible, or all sorts of other crazy beliefs and hybrids, only furthering issues that keep the soul in a sick state.

These mental beliefs create such strong blockages in the minds, that one can only hope to shed them as much as they can, and not dwell on them all while meditating, as meditation will increase personal power, and trigger more of these insanities into extended power.

Clearly, yes. Spiritual practice is by its source a very Satanic thing by definition, considering that Abrahamic programs are all centered around external worship of a jew in the sky, becoming a serf and slave, carrying original "sin" from having any intelligence more than an inanimate rock, and every striving towards development is "evil" and a "sin", as these programs were in the first place created by evil jews who want to control the populace.

Trying to bridge this hebraic insanity with spiritual development has toxic results. It's as if one wants to fill a dam with water, and the dam is plucked with huge holes. It will never be filled with any spiritual wisdom.

A very small category of people does actually have advancement in that regard, but these are people who accept to move onto next levels and do forsake their fake and older skin. But these situations are rare in the New Age, and are more commonly found in older paths or in advanced yogis, who for the most part do keep silent. Some of these people do have some experience with the Serpent too. Just to name an example, that reveals the writer Lao Tzu, was broadly known to have been kundalini advanced, and also a known Naga Serpent on his time, who some say lived to 250 years old and went by mysterious "death" some say at 70 and others are 90. His book Tao Te Ching was lost in translation by pacifists and unspiritual people, who desecrated his teaching completely, but it is clear that the person had a lot of spiritual ability and the ability to see through to the world.

On a final note, the New Age is filled with rules, regulations, diets, and all sorts of things, which highly resemble the Talmudic law at this point. This creates blockages, paranoia, irregular practice, and many other obstacles which cannot allow a person to advance properly or healthily. While this does not invalidate the meaning of meditation and the practices, one will not get too far, as powers at work will keep them suppressed and down.

To advance in meditation in general, one does not have to compulsively go after "kundalini", but there has to be a decent need and necessity for power and awareness, which indirectly leads to further evolution for which after all the serpent exists to help with.
